OUR COUNTRY ROADS.

Why They are as They are—The Effort to Improve Them. New York Evening Post. Another good sign of the times is the issue of an excellent pamphlet by the League of American Wheelmen on the eimprovement of Highways," both town and country. It cannot be too widely circulated, for it contains articles on the making and care of good roads and on city pavements, by experts, who not only urge the saving and the comfort of good roads, but show in detail how they are to be made and maintained. Every farmer in the country ought to have a copy put into his hands.

The editors very naturally refuse to accept the suggestion that "the degree of a nation's civilization may be gauged by the condition of its roads," because "this would be a mortifying test to apply to our own country, for it would place it not only below France, where all the country roads are said to be actually swept every morning, and Germany and England, but even below some of the States of Asia and northern Africa." The excuse for the badness of American roads is that railroads were made here, as nowhere else, when the country was too thinly settled to make good highways attainable, and have ever since absorbed the attention of nearly everybody who was interested in the questions of transportation either for goods or passengers. But the country along nearly every line of 'railroad is now so thickly settled that the question of reaching the railroad has become one of paramount importance. In several of the Western States, and in many parts of this State, the traffic receipts of the railroads fall off heavily in spring, simply because the cartage of goods to the stations is made impossible by the badness of the roads and there is hardly a road in the country in which the work of the American, as compared to the European, draughthorse is not nearly doubled by the condition of the road-bed, even in the best weather, to say nothing of the increased wear and tear of vehicles and harness.

There is another excuse for the badness of American roads, which the Wheelmen's pamphlet does not mention, but which ought not to pass without notice, and that is the invention of the light wayon as a substitute for the saidle and the pillion, as a means of loco

Northern and Northwestern States, must also be taken into account in inquiring why road-making has not kept pace with the other arts in the United States. We believe it is strictly true that the farmers' mode of repairing the roads in the spring has come down without change from the early colonial time, when a highway meant simply an open bridle-path through the woods, free from dangerous holes and passable in the dark by a mounted man. The scraping up of the mud from the ditch to raise the center of the roadbed, and level it, clearly dates from this period, when there was no need to provide for wheeled traffic.

The Only Way to Become a Capitalist,

The Only Way to H-come a Capitalist, Washington Glodden, as the Foruss.

Somebody must save money; and the people who save it will be the capitalists, and they will control the organization of industry and receive the larger share of the profits. If the workingmen will save their money, they may be not only sharers of profits, but owners of stock and receivers of dividends. And the workmen can save their money if they will. It is only way in which they can permanently and surely improve their condition. Legislative reforms, improved industrial methods, may make the way easier for them, but there is no road to comfort and independence, after the way easier for them, but there is no road to comfort and independence, after all, but the plain old path of steady work and sober saving. If the working people of this sountry would save, for the next five years, the money that they spend on beer and tobacco and base ball, they could control a large amount of the capital employed in the industries by which they get their living, and they could turn the dividends of this capital from the pockets of the money-lenders into their own. There is no other way of checking the congestion of wealth and of promoting its diffusion, so expeditious, so certain, and so beneficent as this. I wish the working people would try it.
